Information

GM ASEP streamlines the path to becoming a highly trained automotive technician to less than two years. In GM ASEP, students alternate between San Jacinto College, a GM ASEP College, and hands-on work experience at a sponsoring dealership. GM ASEP instructors are GM trained and in touch with the latest automotive trends. Students learn how to identify, analyze, and solve complex automotive problems. Theory and practical application come together as students spend time working on actual customer vehicles. General Motors requires GM ASEP instructors to have the latest high tech training available. GM ASEP colleges are ready to provide the most current training available in the industry. GM ASEP students complete between 80-100 percent of the GM training required to become a GM certified technician. GM donates new vehicles to its GM ASEP colleges. This ensures that students are training on the latest vehicle technology.

All GM ASEP programs, including San Jacinto College, are accredited by the National Automotive Technicians Education Foundation (NATEF). This accreditation ensures that this training will meet or exceed industry standards. All GM ASEP instructors must be certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence before they are allowed to teach in any GM ASEP classroom. In fact, many of these instructors have gone on to achieve GM World Class status, the highest achievement for a GM technician. Students interested in the GM ASEP program are required to meet with the ASEP coordinator or Department Chair before registering for automotive classes.

Students enrolling into San Jacinto College programs with external learning experiences (i.e., clinical, practicum, externship, cooperative, etc.) will be required to comply with the immunization requirements and policies of the clinical/external learning sites to engage in all clinical/external learning experiences. Vaccination requirements at clinical/external learning sites are implemented pursuant to the independent authority of such facilities and are not mandated by San Jacinto College. Failure to meet the immunization requirements mandated by clinical/external learning sites may limit a student's ability to complete the program and/or may delay the student's graduation date. San Jacinto College does not process exemptions, and students should address
